

Finished! You've removed Chase Debit Card Overdraft Coverage for the following account(s).

Eligible Accounts

Chase Debit Card Overdraft Coverage Updated

This is to confirm that you have notified us that you don't want Chase to authorize and pay overdrafts on your everyday debit card transactions.

We want you to fully understand the potential consequences of removing Chase Debit Card Overdraft Coverage from your account so you can make sure this decision is right for you. Removing your coverage means:

- Everyday debit card purchases will be denied if you don't have sufficient funds.
- You may need to make sufficient deposits in advance so that everyday debit card purchases get approved.
- If you don't have sufficient funds in your account, or available under Overdraft Protection, you will not be able to use your debit card.

Note: By choosing "No," your account(s) will reflect your decision on or before the second business day after this form is accepted by Chase.

If you would like to reactivate Chase Debit Card Overdraft Coverage, please click the "Edit Chase Debit Card Overdraft Coverage" button below.

Introducing Instant Action Alerts – Get increased control over your account(s) and help prevent overdrafts before they happen! Stay one step ahead by clicking the "Receive Instant Action Alerts" button below to get started.

| Account Name | Chase Debit Card Overdraft Coverage |
|-----------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| Amal's Checking (.....4717) | No |
| Mom's Checking (.....8548) | No |